David Chapman in 220 Triathlon Magazine!

AGE-GROUPER TALE

Full Brutal winner David Chapman on the four-lap bike route through Snowdonia

The Full Brutal

Thought Neil's challenge was debilitating? David Chapman took on double the distance...

Llanberis, North Wales, 30 September '12
3.8km swim | 180km bike | 42.2km run

I've done the Norseman for the last five years and The Brutal is on a par with the original extreme triathlon in terms of cold water, leg-sapping climbs, hair-raising descents and stunning scenery. Oh, and sheep.

I gave myself just enough time to adjust to the cold water and had a good, solid swim leading from the gun. After a shocking T1, where I was unsure what to do with my kit due to the low temperatures, I rode the first lap fairly hard, partly because I was freezing, partly due to loving reeling in some of the Brutal Half competitors. But, aware of a super-tough marathon looming, I backed off for parts of laps three and four.

I felt okay on the first run lap but kept steady, thinking of the big picture. I had a bit of cake and a salt tab at the remote aid station and headed back to transition to hit the final lap, which couldn't end quickly enough.

After collecting my support runner and mountain safety bag I headed up Snowdon. The first steep road section nearly broke me, as did several trail sections further up. With the setting sun, and some uncertainty over how big my lead was, I kept running whenever possible, but ensured I was powerwalking when not.

I took the descent hard where safe to do so and before too long I saw second and third places within 50m of each other. I stayed strong to the finish, which was an exceedingly welcome sight. A funky slate trophy and more cake awaited me on the line.

TOP 3 MEN

1 David Chapman	12:42:31
2 Sean McFarlane	13:01:18
3 Jonathan Crocombe	13:01:43

TOP 2 WOMEN

1 Julie Finn	14:24:56
2 Beth Pascall	15:26:00

Race report from his The Brutal iron triathlon victory.
Looking good in Compressport triathlon shorts + US calf guards.
Congratulations again!
