The Peak Dry Shell is Montbell's rainproof jacket made with GORE-TEX® Shake Dry technology. Shake Dry places the waterproof/breathable membrane on the outer layer of the jacket's fabric. The benefit of this construction creates a surface fabric that permanently beads water, eliminating the need for durable water repellent treatments. It also boasts excellent breathability, keeping you dry and comfortable even when you're active. This unique construction has its limitations. Since the membrane is on the outside of the jacket, care needs to be taken, avoiding situations where the jacket is subject to abrasion. We see this jacket demonstrating its true value on missions that are short and don't require heavy packs; like light mountain climbing and speed hikes. Backpackers with heavier loads or thru-hikers that have a light pack but intend to use it every day for 6 months would be better off going with a different option.
